--------------------------	------------------

THIS draft version of the Penal Code was translated into Siamese with several slight alterations. It was promulgated in the Government Gazette on the 1st day of June 127 (1908), and comes into force on the 21st day of September 1908.

PENAL CODE.

BY THE KING'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.

WHEREAS it is expedient to codify and otherwise to improve the criminal law of the Country.

IT IS HEREBY enacted as follows :—

PRELIMINARY.

Section 1.

This law shall be called the Penal Code.

Section 2.

It shall come into force on.....

Section 3.

On and from the day of operation of this Code the following laws and regulations shall be repealed :—

- (1). The laws mentioned in the schedule annexed.
- (2). All other laws and regulations in so far as they relate to any act made punishable or not punishable under this Code.

(a)

Section 4.

The provisions of this Code shall not affect the jurisdiction exercised by the Palace Court, the Ecclesiastical Courts and the Military and Naval Courts.

BOOK I.

GENERAL PROVISIONS.

CHAPTER 1.

EXPLANATIONS.

Section 5.

In this Code, whenever a term is explained, such term is employed in the sense stated in the explanation, unless there is something repugnant to it in the text.

Section 6.

(1). An act may include the omission to do anything enjoined by law or the effect of such omission.

(2). A person is said to do an act wrongfully when he does an act to do which he is not entitled by law.

(3). A person is said to do an act dishonestly when he does an act in order to procure for himself or any other person any advantage to which he is not entitled by law and to the injury of any other person.

(4). A person is said to do an act fraudulently when he does that act with intent to deprive another person of a right by fraud.

(5). A person is said to counterfeit a thing when he makes a thing to resemble another thing with intent to deceive a person by such resemblance.

(6). An offence denotes any act made punishable by the law for the time being in force.

(7). A compoundable offence denotes an offence which can only be prosecuted on the complaint of the injured person.

(8). A conspiracy denotes an agreement between two or more persons to commit an offence.

(9). A bribe denotes any gratification or advantage other than a legal remuneration given to an official in consideration of the doing or not doing of any act within the scope of his functions.

(10). Property denotes anything capable of being the object of a right or ownership. It includes money as well as anything moveable or immoveable.

(11). A public way denotes any land or waterway used by the public. It includes any public road.

(12). A public road denotes any road, place or path over which the public has a right of way on land. It includes any railway or tramway used for public conveyance.

(13). A public place denotes any building or space to which the public has a right of admittance.

(14). A dwelling place denotes any building, tent or vessel or other enclosed space used for human dwelling. It includes such appurtenances as are contiguous to it.

(15). An arm denotes any firearm, sword, dagger, knife, spear, bamboo spear, or any other instrument made for the purpose of shooting, stabbing, cutting or causing grievous bodily harm in any manner.

(16). Cattle and beasts of burden include buffaloes, bulls, bullocks, cows, calves, elephants, horses, ponies, mules, sheep, goats and pigs.

(17). A writing denotes any mark upon paper or any other substance to express words or figures. It includes printing, lithography, photography, engraving and every other mode in which words or figures can be expressed on paper or on any other substance.

(18). A document denotes any writing which may be used as evidence of the matter therein contained.

(19). A public document denotes any document drawn up or authenticated by any competent official. It includes a copy of any such document authenticated as aforesaid.

(20). A valuable document denotes any document by which a right or debt is created, or modified or extinguished or transferred, or by which the creation, modification, extinction or transfer of such right or debt is acknowledged.

(21). A signature includes any mark put to a document by a person unable to write his name.

(22). The year is the solar year according to the official calendar.

(23). The day is of twenty-four hours.

(24). Night means the interval between sunset and sunrise.

(25). A paragraph denotes a portion of a section beginning a new line.

(26). A sub-section denotes a paragraph distinguished by a prefixed number or letter.

CHAPTER 2.

APPLICATION OF PENAL LAWS.

Section 7.

A person shall only be punished for an act done by him if such act be declared to be an offence and the punishment is defined by the law in force at the time of the doing of such act.

No other punishment than that defined by law shall be inflicted.

Section 8.

Whenever the law in force at the time at which an act is done is different from that in force at the time at which the trial takes place, the law which is more favourable to the accused shall be applied.

Section 9.

Whoever commits an offence within the limits of the country shall be tried and punished according to the provisions of Siamese law.

Section 10.

Whoever commits an offence outside the country shall be punished in Siam, in the following cases :—

- (1). If the offence be committed against the King and the State under sections 97 to 111.
- (2). If the offence relate to money, seals or stamps of the State under sections 202 to 221.
- (3). If the offence be piracy.
- (4). If the offence be committed by a Siamese subject, provided that :—
 - (a) there be a complaint by a foreign State or by the injured person ;
 - (b) the offence be punishable by the law of the country where it is committed ;
 - (c) the offence be punishable by Siamese law if committed in Siam, and
 - (d) the offender be not acquitted of such offence in the foreign country where it is committed or the punishment inflicted for such offence be not suffered or precluded by prescription or otherwise remitted.

Section 11.

The general provisions contained in Book I. of this Code shall apply to any offence punishable under the provisions of any Royal decree or law, unless it be otherwise provided.

CHAPTER 3.
PUNISHMENTS AND EXECUTION OF PUNISHMENTS.

Section 12.

The punishments are :—

- (1). Death.
- (2). Imprisonment.
- (3). Fine.
- (4). Restriction of residence.
- (5). Forfeiture of property.
- (6). Security for keeping the peace.

Section 13.

A person sentenced to death shall be beheaded.

Section 14.

The execution shall take place at such time and place as shall be appointed by the proper authorities after Royal Sanction has been obtained.

Section 15.

The body of the executed person shall be delivered to the relatives, if they claim it, by whom it shall be disposed of without any pomp or demonstration.

Section 16.

If a woman sentenced to death be found to be with child, execution of the sentence shall be deferred until after her delivery.

Section 17.

Fine is a certain sum of money expressed in the sentence to be paid to the State.

Section 18.

In default of payment of fine within fifteen days from the day when the sentence became final, the payment may be levied by distress or the offender shall suffer imprisonment in lieu thereof.

The term of imprisonment to which the payment of a fine is commuted shall be reckoned at the rate of one tical a day, provided that in no case shall such imprisonment exceed one year.

Section 19.

Whenever during the time of imprisonment in lieu of payment of a fine the fine is paid, a sum of money equivalent to the number of days passed in prison shall be deducted and the imprisonment shall terminate forthwith.

Section 20.

Whenever the Court has reasonable cause to believe that a person is likely to evade the payment of a fine, the Court may order such person to furnish security for payment of such fine and, until such security is forthcoming, order the immediate arrest and detention of such person.

Section 21.

Whenever an offence is punishable with fine only and the offender voluntarily pays before trial the maximum fine prescribed for such offence, the right of prosecution ceases.

Section 22.

All persons sentenced for the same offence shall be jointly and severally liable for the fine inflicted.

The joint and several liability applies only to the payment of fine and does not extend to imprisonment in lieu thereof.

Section 23.

Whenever this Code provides that the punishment shall be imprisonment and fine, the Court may, if it thinks fit, sentence the offender to imprisonment only.

Section 24.

The punishment of restriction of residence entails, at the discretion of the Court, either

- (1) the prohibition to appear in such places or districts as shall be specified in the judgment, or
- (2) the compulsory residence in such places or districts as shall be specified by the administrative authorities.

Section 25.

The punishment of restriction of residence may be awarded in addition to any other punishment. The period of such restriction shall be stated in the judgment and shall in no case exceed seven years.

Section 26.

Any property adjudged by a Court to be forfeited shall belong to the State.

Section 27.

In addition to the specific cases specially provided for under the provisions of Book II. of this Code, the Court may order to be forfeited:—

(1) any property used or intended to be used for the commission of an offence;

(2) any property acquired through an offence;

provided that such property belongs to a person concerned in the offence either as a principal or as an accessory.

Section 28.

Property the manufacture, use, possession, sale or exposure for sale of which is an offence shall be forfeited whether it does or does not belong to the offender, and without regard to the conviction or non-conviction of any particular person.

Section 29.

Whenever the property forfeited is not delivered to the Court, the Court may order the amount at which it values such property to be levied by distress or to be commuted to imprisonment in the manner described in sections 18, 19 and 20, provided that the imprisonment in lieu of payment shall not exceed six months.

Section 30.

Whenever any person utters threats against any other person, or the Court has reason to believe that any person is likely to commit a breach of the peace, the Court may order such person to execute a bond, in a sum not exceeding five hundred ticals, with or without security, for keeping the peace during such period not exceeding two years as the Court thinks fit.

The foregoing provision shall apply to any vagrant who has no visible means of subsistence and who cannot give a satisfactory account of himself.

Section 31.

Whenever any person bound according to the preceding section does not furnish the security required, the Court may order the imprisonment of such person until the security required is forthcoming, provided that the period of such imprisonment shall not exceed six months.

Section 32.

Except when provided otherwise by the judgment, the period of detention undergone previous to the day of the judgment shall be deducted from the period of imprisonment.

Section 33.

In calculating the period of imprisonment, a day begun shall count for a whole day, and a month shall count for thirty days.

Liberation shall take place on the day following that on which the period of imprisonment terminates.

Section 34.

The provisions of this Code relative to the increase and reduction of punishments do not apply to forfeiture of property.

Section 35.

The penalty of death or of imprisonment for life shall not be inflicted by increasing any other punishment.

Section 36.

Any period of imprisonment when increased under the provisions of this Code shall not exceed twenty years.

Section 37.

If the punishment to be reduced be death, such punishment shall be reduced in the manner following, that is to say:—

- (1). In case the reduction be one third, the punishment shall be reduced to imprisonment for life, or for a period of sixteen to twenty years.
- (2). In case the reduction be one half, the punishment shall be reduced to imprisonment for life or for a period of twelve to twenty years.

Section 38.

If the punishment to be reduced be imprisonment for life, such punishment shall be reduced in the manner following, that is to say:—

- (1). In case the reduction be one third, the punishment shall be reduced to imprisonment for a period of twelve to sixteen years.
- (2). In case the reduction be one half, the punishment shall be reduced to imprisonment for a period of nine to twelve years.

Section 39.

Whenever any punishment is to be increased and reduced under different provisions of this Code, an increase and a reduction of the same degree neutralize and annul each other.

If the increase and the reduction are not of the same degree, the Court shall first increase the punishment and afterwards reduce it.

Section 40.

Whenever the minimum punishment as reduced under this Code is imprisonment of one month or less and fine, the Court may inflict any less period of imprisonment than the minimum, with or without fine, or may inflict fine only.

Section 41.

Whenever any offender is sentenced to imprisonment for one year or less, and such offender has not been previously convicted, the Court may, if it thinks fit, order by its judgment the execution of the imprisonment to be conditionally suspended.

Section 42.

Whenever the execution of a judgment has been suspended under section 41 and the offender does not commit within five years any other offence defined in Book II. Titles I. to IX., for which he is sentenced to imprisonment by a final judgment, the conditionally suspended sentence becomes null and void.

If the offender commits within five years any such subsequent offence for which he is sentenced to imprisonment by a final judgment, the conditionally suspended sentence shall be executed forthwith, without prejudice to the punishment awarded for the subsequent offence and to the increased punishment for recidive, that is to say, the offender shall successively undergo both terms of imprisonment, and the Court in awarding punishment for the second offence shall apply the rules concerning recidive.

CHAPTER 4.

CAUSES WHICH EXCLUDE OR LESSEN
THE LIABILITY TO PUNISHMENT.

Section 43.

A person shall only be punished for an act done intentionally, except where an act done by negligence is specifically made punishable by law.

A person is said to do an act intentionally if such person desired the doing of that act and at the same time desired or could foresee the effect of such doing.

A person is said to do an act by negligence if such person does that act unintentionally but under any of the following circumstances, that is to say :—

- (a) By omission of such care as might be expected from a person of ordinary prudence.
- (b) By omission of such skill in a profession as might be expected from a person exercising such profession.
- (c) In disobedience to any law, bye-law or lawful order.

Section 44.

Whoever intending to commit an offence commits such offence by mistake or accident against a person other than the person whom he intended to injure or could foresee he would injure, shall be liable to the punishment provided for the offence he knew, or he could foresee, he would commit.

Section 45.

The fact that an offender is ignorant of the law is in no case an excuse for his offence.

Section 46.

A person shall not be punished for any act done by him if at the time it is done he is prevented either by defective mental power or by any disease affecting his mind from appreciating the nature or illegality of his act, or from controlling his own conduct.

The Court may, if it thinks liberation dangerous for the public security, order such person to be put at the disposal of the Government for his detention in a lunatic asylum or other suitable place of safe custody.

Section 47.

Whenever a person, at the time of committing any offence, by reason of defective mental power or of any disease affecting his mind, is only partially able to control his conduct or to appreciate the nature or illegality of his act, the punishment provided for such offence shall be reduced at the discretion of the Court.

Section 48.

Intoxication does not come under the provisions of sections 46 and 47, unless such intoxication is caused without the knowledge or against the will of the offender.

Section 49.

Except for offences against the King and State defined in sections 97 to 111, a person shall not be punished for any act done in the case of necessity, which exists:—

- (1) when such person is under the influence of a force such that he cannot avoid or resist, or

- (2) when such person acts in good faith in order to avoid the infliction upon himself or any other person of a serious, imminent and irreparable evil which could not be otherwise avoided and which the person doing such act does not himself voluntarily cause to exist, provided that no more is done than is reasonably necessary under the circumstances.

Section. 50.

A person shall not be punished who commits any act reasonably required for the necessary defence of the life, honour or property of himself or of any other person against unlawful violence.

Section 51.

The right of lawful defence does not exist against any official acting in good faith and under colour of his office.

Section 52.

A person shall not be punished for any act done in the case of carrying out a lawful command. A lawful command exists :—

- (1) where the act is done in accordance with any law in force, or
- (2) where the act is prescribed by any civil or military official whom such person is bound to obey, or believes in good faith he is bound to obey notwithstanding such order be unlawful, provided that the person doing the act believes in good faith and on reasonable grounds that the order is lawful.

Section 53.

Whenever under any of the exceptions contained in sections 49 to 52 the act committed is in excess of what is necessary or permitted by law, the punishment provided for the offence may be reduced at the discretion of the Court.

Section 54.

Whoever commits any offence relating to property defined in sections 288 to 296, 304 to 321, 324 to 329 and 340 against any of his relations in the direct ascending or descending line shall be liable to the punishment prescribed for such offence reduced by one half.

If such offence be committed by a husband against his wife or by a wife against her husband, no punishment shall be inflicted.

Section 55.

Whenever a person commits any offence on grave, unjust and sudden provocation, the punishment provided for such offence shall be reduced by one half.

Section 56.

A child under the age of seven years shall not be punished for committing any offence.

Section 57.

Whenever a child ^{18/11/1956} over the age of seven years and under fourteen years commits any offence, the Court may either :—

- (1) order such child to be discharged after due admonition, if necessary, or
- (2) hand over the child to his parents or guardians and order the parents or guardians to enter into a bond in a sum not exceeding one hundred ticals, with or without security, for the good behaviour of the child during a period not exceeding three years, or
- (3) direct such child to be kept in a Reformatory School for a definite period of time not exceeding the eighteenth year of age of such child.

Section 58.

Whenever a child over fourteen years of age and under sixteen commits any offence, the Court shall ascertain whether such child had attained sufficient maturity of understanding to judge of the nature and illegality of his conduct.

If the child had not attained such sufficient maturity of understanding, the Court shall apply the provisions of section 57 for children over seven years of age.

If the child had attained such sufficient maturity of understanding, the punishment provided for such offence shall be reduced by one half, or the Court may direct the child to be kept in a Reformatory School in accordance with section 57 sub-section 3.

Section 59.

Whenever there exist in favour of an offender any extenuating circumstances, the punishment provided for the offence may be reduced by not more than one half, whether already increased or reduced under any other provisions of this Code.

Extenuating circumstances may include weakness of mind, previous good conduct, the efforts made by the offender to minimise the injurious consequences of the offence, his voluntary surrender before the discovery of the offence, the information he may have given about the circumstances of the offence, or any other circumstance which the Court may consider to be an extenuation of the criminal liability of the offender.

CHAPTER 5.

ATTEMPT.

Section 60.

Whoever attempts to commit an offence but owing to circumstances over which he has no control, is prevented from the commission of such offence, shall be liable to the punishment provided for such offence reduced by one third.

Section 61.

Whoever attempting to commit an offence spontaneously desists from further carrying into effect the contemplated offence, shall only be liable for the act actually done.

Section 62.

A person shall not be punished for attempting to commit any petty offence.

CHAPTER 6.

PARTICIPATION IN THE COMMISSION OF AN OFFENCE.

Section 63.

Whenever any offence is committed by two or more persons every person directly taking part in the commission of any of the acts which constitute such offence is said to be a principal, and shall be liable to the punishment prescribed for such offence in the same manner as if he had committed the offence alone.

Section 64.

Whoever by gift, promise, violence, threat, abuse of authority or otherwise, causes or instigates another person to commit any offence shall be liable, as principal, to the punishment provided for such offence.

Section 65.

Whoever commits any of the acts hereafter specified, that is to say :—

- (1) who procures the opportunity, provides the means, or gives any information which may assist in the commission of the offence ;
- (2) who by any acts done prior to, or at the time of the offence, facilitates the commission of such offence ; is said to be an accessory to such offence, and shall be liable to the punishment provided for such offence reduced by one third.

Section 66.

Whenever any offence is committed by means of the publication of any book, periodical work or other writing, the person having caused such publication to be made shall be liable as principal to the punishment provided for such offence.

If the person having caused the publication to be made cannot be brought in Court, the publisher or printer shall be liable as principal to the punishment provided for such offence.

Section 67.

Any person selling or distributing any book, periodical work or other writing by the publication of which any offence is committed shall be liable to punishment as an accessory, provided that such person knew that an offence was committed by the publication of such book, periodical work or other writing.

Section 68.

Any circumstances relating to the person of an offender, which exclude, lessen or aggravate the liability to punishment shall only apply to such principal or accessory whom they personally concern.

Any circumstances relating to the nature of the offence which exclude, lessen or aggravate the liability to punishment shall apply to any person concerned in the offence, whether principal or accessory.

Section 69.

An accessory to any petty offence shall not be punished.

CHAPTER 7.

CONCURRENCE OF OFFENCES.

Section 70.

Whoever by one and the same act violates several provisions of the law, shall be punished under the provision prescribing the severest punishment.

Section 71.

Whoever by one and the same judgment is found guilty of several distinct offences shall be liable to the punishment prescribed for each offence, provided that the aggregate term of imprisonment, unless it be imprisonment for life, shall not exceed twenty years, and the aggregate term of imprisonment in lieu of fine shall not exceed two years.

CHAPTER 8.
 RECIDIVE.

Section 72.

Whoever having been convicted of a prior offence commits a subsequent offence before a specified time has elapsed from the date of the completion or remission of the punishment inflicted for such prior offence, is said to commit recidive. ๗๕๖๓๓.

Whoever is found guilty of recidive within five years shall be liable to the punishment prescribed for the second offence increased by one third.

Section 73.

Whoever is found guilty of recidive within three years, both the prior and subsequent offence falling under the same heading of the following list:—

- (1) offences against the King and the State;
- (2) offences against officials;
- (3) malfeasance in office;
- (4) offences relating to public justice;
- (5) secret societies, criminal associations and riots;
- (6) offences against public security and public communications;
- (7) offences against public health;
- (8) false money, false seals, stamps and tickets; false documents;
- (9) offences against morality;
- (10) offences against life and body;

(11) offences against liberty and reputation ;

(12) offences against property ;

shall be liable to the punishment prescribed for the subsequent offence increased by one half, provided that the punishment inflicted for the prior offence was imprisonment for a period of not less than six months.

Section 74.

Whoever has been found guilty twice of any offence against life and body, or of any offence of theft, snatching, robbery, gang-robbery, piracy, extortion, cheating and fraud, criminal misappropriation or receiving stolen property described in sections 249 to 259, and sections 288 to 323, and within five years commits any offence under any of the same sections, shall be liable to double the punishment prescribed for the subsequent offence, provided that the punishment inflicted for each prior offence was imprisonment for a period of not less than six months.

Section 75.

The provisions relating to recidive in sections 72, 73 and 74 shall not apply to :—

- (1). Any petty offence.
- (2). Any offence committed by negligence.

Section 76.

Whoever is found guilty of recidive within one year, the prior and subsequent offence coming both under the same sub-section of sections 334 to 340 shall be liable to double the punishment prescribed for the subsequent offence.

CHAPTER 9.
EXTINCTION OF THE RIGHT TO PROSECUTE
OR EXECUTE A PUNISHMENT.

Section 77.

The right to prosecute any person for an offence or to execute punishment against any person shall be extinguished by the death of such person.

Section 78.

Prosecution of an offence shall be precluded by prescription :—

- (1). After twenty years in the case of offences punishable with death, or imprisonment for life.
- (2). After fifteen years in the case of offences punishable with imprisonment exceeding seven years and not exceeding twenty years.
- (3). After five years in the case of offences punishable with imprisonment exceeding one month and not exceeding seven years.
- (4). After one year in the case of all other offences.

Section 79.

The prescription of prosecution shall be interrupted by any proceeding instituted before a Court, or the issue of any summons or warrant against the accused in respect of the offence charged.

Section 80.

The right to prosecute a person having committed a compoundable offence shall be extinguished if the person entitled to prosecute does not make a complaint within three months from the day when the offence and the person who committed it became known to him.

Section 81.

The lawful withdrawal of a complaint regarding any compoundable offence or the lawful composition of such offence shall extinguish the right of prosecution.

Section 82.

The execution of punishment shall be precluded by prescription :—

- (1). After twenty years in the case of a sentence to death or to imprisonment for life.
- (2). After fifteen years in the case of a sentence to imprisonment exceeding seven years, and not exceeding twenty years.
- (3). After five years in the case of a sentence to any other punishment.

Section 83.

The prescription of the right to execute punishment shall be computed from the day when the sentence inflicting such punishment became final or when the execution of such punishment ceased.

The prescription shall not run during the time the execution of the sentence is suspended according to law.

Section 84.

The prescription of the execution of punishment shall be interrupted :—

- (1). By the arrest of the convicted person.
- (2). By an order of any competent official directing the execution of the punishment.

Section 85.

Whenever the prescription of the right to prosecute or to execute punishment has been interrupted, a fresh period of prescription shall be computed from the day of such interruption.

Section 86.

The prescription of the right to prosecute or to execute punishment shall apply even when the accused or the convicted person does not avail himself of it.

CHAPTER 10.

CLAIM FOR RESTITUTION AND DAMAGES.

Section 87.

Whenever any offence has been committed, two separate actions may be brought regarding the offence, that is to say :—

- (1) a criminal prosecution for awarding the punishment provided by the Penal Law for such offence, and
- (2) a civil claim for making good any injury caused by the offence to any person.

The civil claim accrues to the injured person. It includes the restitution of the property which the injured person has been wrongfully deprived of by the offence, or its value, and damages for any other injury resulting from the offence.

Section 88.

The criminal prosecution does not bar the right of the injured person to bring a civil claim.

Section 89.

The civil claim may be brought either in the Criminal Court where the case is tried or in the competent Civil Court.

Section 90.

In giving judgment concerning the civil claim, the Court shall be bound by the facts as found by the judgment in the criminal action, if any.

Section 91.

Judgment in the civil claim shall be given in accordance with the provisions of law concerning civil liability, without regard to the conviction or non-conviction of the accused.

The valuation of the property which is ordered to be returned to the claimant, and the amount of damages shall be fixed according to the actual value of such property and to the injury actually suffered, provided that such valuation or amount is not in excess of the claim.

Section 92.

Execution of judgment granting restitution or damages shall be carried out in the same way as the levying of a fine, according to sections 18, 19 and 20.

Section 93.

Except when provided otherwise by the judgment, all persons sentenced for the same offence are jointly and severally liable for restitution and damages.

Such joint and several liability applies only to the payment of damages or restitution, and does not extend to imprisonment in lieu thereof.

Section 94.

In case of costs, fine, restitution and damages being levied by distress concurrently and the property being not sufficient to satisfy all three, the proceeds shall be applied as follows:—

- (1). To the payment of costs.
- (2). To the payment of restitution and damages due to the injured person.
- (3). To the payment of fine.

Section 95.

Even when the injured party does not bring a civil claim, the Court may, in giving judgment in the criminal action order any property or the value thereof to be restored to the lawful owner.

Section 96.

The right to bring a civil claim in connection with an offence shall be precluded by prescription according to sections 78 to 81, 85 and 86 in like manner as the right to prosecute the offender.

Section 132.

Whoever being an official entrusted in his official capacity with the purchase, manufacture, administration or custody of any property exercises his functions in order to procure for himself or any other person any undue advantage to the injury of the State or of the owner of such property, shall be punished with imprisonment of three months to seven years and fine of one hundred to two thousand ticals.

Section 133.

Whoever being an official takes either directly or indirectly any pecuniary interest in any matter the management or superintendence of which has been entrusted to him in his official capacity, shall be punished with imprisonment not exceeding six months or fine not exceeding five hundred ticals, or both.

Section 134.

Whoever being an official entrusted in his official capacity with the disbursement of money of the State or of any Public Institution pays out a larger amount than is actually due in order to procure for himself or for any other person any undue advantage, shall be punished with imprisonment of three months to seven years and fine of one hundred to two thousand ticals.

Section 135.

Whoever being an official entrusted or pretending to be entrusted in his official capacity with the collection of taxes, duties or other payments to the State or to any Public Institution, collects any money or property which is not due or in excess of what is due, without accounting to the State or to the Public Institution for such money or property, shall be punished with imprisonment of three months to seven years and fine of one hundred to two thousand ticals.

Section 136.

Whoever being an official, by a wrongful exercise of his functions, compels any person to deliver or to procure to himself or to any other person any property or other undue advantage, shall be punished with imprisonment of three months to seven years and fine of one hundred to three thousand ticals.

Section 137.

Whoever being an official demands, accepts or agrees to accept, for himself or for any other person any property or other undue advantage as a motive or reward for showing or forbearing to show favour or disfavour to any person in the exercise of his official functions, shall be punished with imprisonment not exceeding two years and fine not exceeding one thousand ticals.

Section 138.

Whoever being an official demands, accepts or agrees to accept for himself or for any other person any bribe for exercising or omitting to exercise any of his functions, provided that such exercise or non-exercise of his functions be not wrongful, shall be punished with imprisonment not exceeding two years and fine which may extend to one thousand ticals or to double the value of the bribe.

If such exercise or non-exercise of his functions be wrongful, the punishment shall be imprisonment of three months to five years and fine which may extend from one hundred to two thousand ticals, or to double the value of the bribe.

If such wrongful exercise or non-exercise of his functions be not committed, the punishment shall be reduced by one half.

Section 139.

Whoever being an official vested with judicial functions demands, accepts or agrees to accept for himself or for any other person any bribe intended to influence any opinion, order or judgment to be given by him in his official capacity, shall be punished with imprisonment of two to ten years and fine which may extend from one hundred to five thousand ticals, or to double the value of the bribe.

Section 140.

Whenever a bribe is demanded or accepted or agreed to be accepted by a person who expects to become an official and who, on being appointed to office, exercises his functions in consideration of such bribe, such person shall be liable to the punishment prescribed for an official demanding or accepting a bribe.

Section 141.

Whenever a bribe has been given, such bribe or the value of such bribe shall be forfeited.

Section 142.

Whoever being an official entrusted in his official capacity with the discovery, investigation or prosecution of offences, wrongfully exercises or omits to exercise his functions with intent to save a person from legal punishment, shall be punished with imprisonment of three months to five years and fine of fifty to one thousand ticals.

If such official wrongfully exercises or omits to exercise his functions with intent to subject a person to any punishment not due or in excess of what is lawful, the punishment shall be imprisonment of six months to seven years and fine of one hundred to two thousand ticals.

Section 143.

Whoever being an official employed in the Post or Telegraph Department wrongfully breaks open or destroys or makes away with any letter, telegram or other mail matter, or delivers such letter, telegram or mail matter to any person to whom he knows it not to be addressed, or discloses the contents of such letter, telegram or mail matter, shall be punished with imprisonment of one month to six months and fine of ten to one hundred ticals.

If injury be caused to any person, the punishment shall be imprisonment of three months to five years and fine of fifty to one thousand ticals.

Section 144.

Whoever being an official and by reason of his functions possessed of any secret relating to the business of the State, wrongfully discloses such secret, shall be punished with imprisonment not exceeding one year and fine not exceeding one thousand ticals.

Section 145.

Whoever being an official wrongfully exercises or omits to exercise his functions with intent to cause injury to any person, provided that such act is not otherwise declared to be an offence by law, shall be punished with imprisonment not exceeding two years and fine not exceeding one thousand ticals.

Section 146.

Whoever being an official invested with the duty of executing any law, or regulation, or judgment or order of any superior officer prevents or obstructs the execution of such law, regulation, judgment or order, shall be punished with imprisonment not exceeding six months and fine not exceeding five hundred ticals.

TITLE III.

OFFENCES RELATING TO PUBLIC JUSTICE.

CHAPTER 1.

OFFENCES AGAINST THE ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE.

Whenever the offence defined in this section, sub-sections 3 and 4, is committed by the husband or wife of the offender or accused, no punishment shall be inflicted.

 CHAPTER 2.

 FALSE CHARGE AND FALSE EVIDENCE.

Section 155.

Whoever having duly taken an oath or made an affirmation makes in any judicial proceeding a statement which he knows to be false on any point material to the case, is said to give false evidence, and shall be punished with imprisonment of three months to three years and fine of fifty to five hundred ticals.

Section 156.

Whoever gives false evidence in a criminal proceeding shall be punished with imprisonment of three months to five years and fine of one hundred to one thousand ticals.

Section 157.

Whoever causes any circumstance to exist or makes any false entry or statement in any book or document knowing that such circumstance, entry or statement may be produced in any judicial proceeding, as evidence on any point material to the case, is said to fabricate false evidence.

Whoever produces any fabricated evidence in any judicial proceeding shall be liable to the punishment prescribed by sections 155 or 156 as the case may be.

Section 158.

Whoever by a complaint or information charges any person with the commission of an offence, knowing such charge to be false, shall be punished with imprisonment of one month to two years and fine of twenty to five hundred ticals.

If the charge relate to an offence punishable with death or with imprisonment of fifteen years or upwards the punishment shall be imprisonment of three months to three years and fine of fifty to one thousand ticals.

Section 159.

Whoever by a complaint or information gives notice of an offence which he knows not to have been committed, or fabricates any false evidence in connection with such pretended offence, shall be punished with imprisonment not exceeding one year and fine not exceeding five hundred ticals.

Section 160.

Whenever in consequence of any false evidence or any false charge defined in sections 156, 157, 158 and 159 an innocent person be convicted of a petty offence or of any other offence punishable with imprisonment not exceeding three months, or with fine only, the person who gave or fabricated such false evidence or made such false charge shall be punished with imprisonment of one to five years and fine of one hundred to one thousand ticals.

If the innocent person be convicted of any other offence, the punishment shall be imprisonment of two to ten years and fine of one hundred to one thousand ticals.

If the innocent person be sentenced to death and executed the punishment shall be imprisonment of ten to twenty years and fine of one hundred to two thousand ticals.

Section 161.

Whoever making a false charge withdraws the same before any proceedings are taken against the person charged shall be punished with imprisonment not exceeding three months and fine not exceeding one hundred ticals.

Section 162.

Whoever giving false evidence withdraws the same and declares the truth before the conclusion of his evidence shall not be punished for such offence.

If in the presence of the official who received the false evidence such statement be withdrawn and the truth declared before any judgment be given and before any charge for false evidence be entered, the punishment prescribed for false evidence shall be reduced by one-half.

CHAPTER 3.

ESCAPE OF PRISONERS.

Section 163.

Whoever being in lawful custody escapes from such custody shall be punished with imprisonment not exceeding six months or fine not exceeding one hundred ticals, or both.

Section 164.

Whoever being in lawful custody escapes by breaking gaol or committing or threatening to commit any violence shall be punished with imprisonment of three months to three years and fine of fifty to five hundred ticals.

Section 165.

Whoever rescues any person in lawful custody from such custody or facilitates his escape shall be punished with imprisonment of one month to two years and fine of twenty to two hundred ticals.

If such person be a prisoner under sentence of death or of imprisonment of fifteen years or upwards, the punishment shall be imprisonment of six months to five years and fine of fifty to five hundred ticals.

Section 166.

Whoever rescues any person in lawful custody or facilitates his escape from such custody by committing or threatening to commit any violence shall be punished with imprisonment of six months to five years and fine of fifty to five hundred ticals.

If such person be a prisoner under sentence of death or of imprisonment of fifteen years or upwards, the punishment shall be imprisonment of one to seven years and fine of one hundred to one thousand ticals.

Section 167.

Whenever a person committing any of the offences defined in sections 165 and 166 is the husband or wife of the rescued person, or brother or sister, or any relation in the direct ascending or descending line, the punishment shall be reduced by one half.

Section 168.

Whoever being an official entrusted in his official capacity with the care of any person in lawful custody facilitates or intentionally allows the escape of such person, shall be punished with imprisonment of one to seven years and fine of one hundred to one thousand ticals.

If such person be a prisoner under sentence of death or of imprisonment of fifteen years or upwards, the punishment shall be imprisonment of two to ten years and fine of two hundred to two thousand ticals.

Section 169.

Whoever being an official having in his functions the care of any person in lawful custody negligently allows such person to escape, shall be punished with imprisonment of one month to two years and fine of twenty to two hundred ticals.

If such person be a prisoner under sentence of death or of imprisonment for fifteen years or more, the punishment shall be imprisonment of three months to three years and fine of fifty to five hundred ticals.

In case the escaped person be retaken within four months the punishment inflicted upon the negligent official shall cease forthwith.

Section 170.

Any person sentenced to restriction of residence who shall move outside the limits of his compulsory residence, or appear in any prohibited place or district, shall be punished with imprisonment not exceeding one year and fine not exceeding five hundred ticals.

Section 171.

In awarding punishment under the provisions of this chapter, the Court shall take into consideration the length of imprisonment or restriction of residence still to be suffered by the offender and the gravity of the offence with which such offender was charged.

 TITLE IV.

 OFFENCES AGAINST RELIGION.

Section 172.

Whoever destroys, damages or defiles any place of worship of any religion or any object held sacred by any class of persons, in a manner likely to insult the religion of any person, shall be punished with imprisonment not exceeding three years and fine not exceeding one thousand ticals.

Prosecution of any offence defined in this chapter shall only be instituted on the complaint of the injured party.

CHAPTER 3. DEFAMATION.

Section 282.

Whoever in the presence of, or by communication made to two or more persons, imputes anything which is likely to injure the reputation of any other person or to expose such person to public hatred or contempt, is said to commit defamation, and shall be punished with imprisonment not exceeding six months or fine not exceeding one thousand ticals, or both.

If the offence be committed by means of the publication of any book, periodical work, newspaper, design or other writing, the punishment shall be imprisonment not exceeding one year or fine not exceeding two thousand ticals, or both.

Section 283.

Whoever in good faith expresses an opinion under any of the following circumstances :—

- (1) by way of self justification or defence, or for the protection of a lawful interest;
- (2) in a report made by an official in his official capacity;
- (3) by way of fair comment on the merits of any person or thing subjected to public criticism;
- (4) by way of fair publication of or comment on the proceedings of any Court of Justice or public meeting; shall not be punished for defamation.

Section 284.

A person prosecuted for defamation shall not be allowed to prove that the imputation made by him is true, except in the following cases :—

- (1). If the Court be satisfied that the imputation is made for the public good.
- (2). If the imputation be made against an official concerning any act done by him in his official capacity.
- (3). If the complainant move the Court to enquire into the imputation, and to state in the judgment whether such imputation is true or not.

If the accused fail to prove the truth of his imputation, he shall be punished with imprisonment not exceeding two years or fine not exceeding five thousand ticals, or both.

Section 285.

Any statement made verbally or in writing in the course of any judicial proceeding by the parties or their counsel shall not be punishable, provided that the Court may reject such statement, or order its withdrawal or amendment on such terms as the Court may think fit.

Section 286.

In addition to any punishment prescribed in this chapter the Court may, in its discretion, upon the application of the complainant, order :—

- (1). The copies of the defamatory matter to be seized and destroyed.
- (2). The judgment of the Court to be published, wholly or in part, in one or more newspapers at the expense of the convicted person.

Section 287.

Prosecution of any offence defined in this chapter shall only be instituted on the complaint of the injured party, and if the injured party die, or if the defamation be committed against a dead person, by the husband or wife or by any relation within the second degree of the deceased.

TITLE IX.
