Wy vestigen de aandacht van het film-minnend publiek op het grote acteer-stuk "Counsellor at law", gespeeld door John Barrymore en andere sterren van het witte doek, welke film Zaterdag en Zondag (21-22 April) in het Gloria theater zal worden vertoond.

Zoals bekend mag worden geacht is John Barrymore evenals de andere spelers (dezer beroemde familie) een tooneel-speler en hy heeft in deze film volop gelegenheid om de grote Kunst (met een hoofdletter) uit te beelden.

Onnooid te vermelden, dat het stuk een goede wredders heeft.

Log Cabin Leaders Of Japan

By Sterling Fisher, Jr.
From CURRENT HISTORY

Japan today presents the phenomenon of a stanchly monarchist country with its leadership drawn chiefly from the ranks of the humble. Of six or more men who now dominate the scene, only one--Prince Kimochi Saionji, the Elder Statesman--was born an aristocrat. The others are self-made men, the stories of whose rise suffer nothing by comparison with no el advenimiento del primer ted American examples.

Primier Makoto Saito, eighty-third year he had to son of a retainer of a feudal lord, was once a page in a government office. to preserve it by rejecting reactionaries and choosing war minister, began at a for the premiership another upholder of parliamentism, Admiral Saito...

Foreign Minister Hirota, a foe of the militarist dogma of "Japan-against-the-world," is offering a new deal in Japanese diplomacy. To accept isolation as inevitable he believes is perilous and costly. There need be no "crisis of 1935", he insists, if Japan takes the initiative in smoothing out her differences with other nations. His policy assumes that much of the tension in Japan's foreign relations has come because of waiting to accept assistance from Hiroa's family.

No less remarkable is the fact that most of Hirota's plan to stress a policy of conciliation has won these active leaders of a youthful vigorous people are advanced in age. Only Araki and Hirota are younger than threescore and ten. The former is 57 and the latter 55, but Prince Saionji is 84; Finance Minister Takahashi and Mitsuru Toyama are each 78 and Premier Saito is 75.

Prince Saionji, the sole aristocrat among them, is the greatest democrat of them all. His title of Elder Statesman (Genro) is based on nothing more substantial than tradition; yet it makes him, in times of stress, the emperor's chief adviser and personal representative. Saionji, in his long span of life, witnessed a complete political cycle in Japan. He saw feudalism break down and, as the commander of an armored samurai unit, helped to restore the power of the emperor, which through the centuries had been usurped by the military rulers, the Shoguns.

Salonji saw constitutionalism established in Japan and helped to set up the Parliament. He assisted the rise of the party system and later became president of the Seiyukai party. He spurred his country on toward democracy by helping Takashi Hara to become the first prime minister of common blood. But he has also seen heavy assaults upon the representative system that he fostered and in his Shoguns. Salonji saw constitutionalism established in Japan and helped to set up the Parliament. He assisted the rise of the party system and later became president of the Seiyukai party. He spurred his country on toward democracy by helping Takashi Hara to become the first prime minister of common blood. But he has also seen heavy assaults upon the representative system that he fostered and in his Shoguns. By practicing the austerities of Zen Buddhism he moderated his intensity and by close association with the leaders of a half dozen foreign countries he dissipated the intolerance of his early ultra-nationalism.

War Scares And A Big Navy

War Talk But No Grievance

War is more likely to come through the "fear complex" than through deliberate planning for conquest. There are alarmists writing in the press of various nations, and promoting armament schemes in war offices and in parliament, who seem bent upon frightening people into the feeling that war may now come at a moment's notice.

There are writers in Europe—some of them having influence as experts—who are calmly announcing that the war between Japan and the United States is imminent. Nothing can be done to avert it, or even to postpone it, in the opinion of these observers across the Atlantic. They are doing what they can to encourage the restless war spirit that the wiser Japanese leaders have sought to restrain.

Since Americans have only the most friendly feeling for the Japanese and have no grievance of any kind, they may well wonder where the war talk originates and what lies behind it. There are European interests which believe they would profit by a struggle in Pacific that would tax the resources of America, while diverting Japan from the bold policies that bid fair to give her the dominant place in Asia.

A war with the United States on the part of Japan would promptly reestablish Great Britain's textile trade in India and China that the Japanese have been usurping. It would turn the attention of Russia away from Western Europe, to a resumption of eastward movements on a large scale. Looking on from our own standpoint, it would seem as if the Japanese war party could undertake nothing more likely to prove disastrous than an attack upon the United States. The interests in Asia of the British and French, as well as those of the Chinese, Russians, and Koreans, would obviously prefer to see Japan defeated rather than the United States.

Our Philippine Outpost
This country, therefore, could well afford to act upon the defensive, while developing its military and naval resources. It is likely enough that Japan would take possession of the Philippines at the outset of a war with the United States. Various countries have interests of one kind or another in the Philippines, and our flag has remained there for no clear reasons of advantage to ourselves. The Filipinos say they do not want us there. To have the Japanese replace us would give the Filipino po-

The Japanese were bitterly disappointed over our decision to stay, but they could not attempt to dispossess the United States.

The German and British Pacific squadrons would together have supported America as against Japan, and the Russians would have been of the same mind. Japan never became reconciled to the new position of the United States in the Far East. She had financed General Aguinaldo and the Filipinos in their uprising against the Spanish government of the Islands. She defended their outlying islands. We renounced the right to fortify our holdings in those distant islands of the Pacific by increasing the strength of the fortifications. Our legal rights, as universally recognized, in no manner differed from the legal rights of the Japanese to liticians the lesson that many people think is what ways we have set the world a good example of colonial administration in our effort to teach the Filipinos something about public health, popular education, improved agriculture, and western means of transportation. But nearly all of the American school teachers came back home long ago. Americans are not seeking careers in that quarter. Little is left except property interests that they the favourable access to American markets of certain products that compete unpleasantly with some of our own.

Paying the price for an ideal

As part of the price we paid at the Washington naval conference for the arrangement that fixed battleship ratios, we agreed not to protect our sovereign holdings in those distant islands of the Pacific by increasing the strength of the fortifications. Our legal rights, as universally recognized, in no manner differed from the legal rights of the Japanese to the Philippines. We renounced the right to fortify our holdings, leaving Japan in the West Indies. She nese rights unimpaired.

At that time we had made progress in the construction of a new navy much stronger than that of Great Britain, and more than twice as strong as any navy that Japan could afford to build. Our motive in building a large navy

Pero es que no se puede jugar sin peligros efectivos con el nombre de un hombre, que no ha cometido otro delito que proporcionarle dichas y felicidades a la mujer que creyó que le amaba.

Pero hay razones poderosas de orden psicológico y fisiológico, que muchas veces justifican esta clase de adulterio. Pero en la mujer casada con hijos no tiene razón de existir el adulterio. La mujer-madre que engaña a su marido, cualesquiera que fueran las causas, no realiza sólo una traición, sino que echa una maldición sobre la vida de sus hijos inocentes.

La mujer madre tiene más obligaciones y más derechos para sus hijos, que para su marido. Poco importa la vida de éste. Su abandono y su indiferencia deben ser acicate para hacer más firme el cariño de madre. Ser madre es el sacerdocio más sublime y más difícil de la tierra. Y es el por qué en la mujer casada la traición--según sus diferencias--tiene facetas sublimes y episodios oscuros.

Pensamientos

Lo que mata las repúblicas es la ignorancia; ilustrad al pueblo si teméis el despotismo. Lo que mata la religión es la fe que no razona; ilustrad al pueblo si teméis el descreimiento.

Mientras más democrático es un país, más necesario es que el individuo sea poderoso y su propiedad sagrada.
